1	He doesn't realise how much I do. I always think he notices what I don't do rather than what I do.	2/8/2019 3:07 PM
2	I can't bear water marks on the taps, or a dirty toilet. He seems to create both. If I didn't clean on a regular basis it would just build up because he doesn't do much.	2/8/2019 3:04 PM
3	I wish she would do a bit more. Sometimes it can cause arguments as she'll just leave stuff. She also has a habit of putting a wash on and mixing colours up. I have lost count of the number of 'pink' shirts I have!	2/8/2019 2:59 PM
4	We tend to share chores.	2/8/2019 2:55 PM
5	Cleaning has never been a contentious issue in our house because on the rare occasion he does something, he does such a poor job that I have to do it again, so what's the point? Quicker to do it myself.	2/8/2019 2:22 PM
6	We try to share, but I sometimes do more as I'm in the house longer. We definitely have blue and pink jobs which sounds a bit sexist, but it works!	2/8/2019 2:10 PM
7	He is a lazy pig who expects me do everything, cos that's what mummy did. If he were to lift a finger to help I'd be checking his temperature to make sure he was feeling alright. I teach our son how to do chores as I refuse to raise a lazy, chauvinistic piglet.	2/8/2019 2:02 PM
8	My wife's a little gem. She takes care of everything in the house as I work long hours. Always looks like a show home.	2/8/2019 1:54 PM
9	Neither of us like cleaning, and we both think each other should do more! We try to share but there's always one person that does more than the other. That would be me.	2/8/2019 1:48 PM
10	My partner is very selfish. Always decides to do the hoovering while I'm watching Jeremy Kyle. I can put the volume on max so I can hear it but I don't have xray vision to see through his fat arse in front of the Tele! Trying to make the place look like a museum will probably end up in divorce. It wouldn't be a massive issue, but the Dyson is the only thing that does any sucking in this household!	2/6/2019 11:29 AM
11	Both bad at it and both blame each other	2/2/2019 10:29 PM
12	My girlfriend looks after me and the house well. She knows her place :)	1/28/2019 5:01 PM
13	I like to think there's a fair split with chores. He works longer hours than me so I do a bit more in the house. I draw the line at ironing his shirts though...	1/28/2019 4:57 PM
14	She moans at me constantly for not doing enough, but I think I do as much as she does. I do the bins and outside jobs more that she does. She doesn't take any interest in the garden and I don't moan...	1/28/2019 4:53 PM
15	As with most men, he leaves it all to me. He pretends he 'can't' clean. Boo bloody hoo. I've even taught him step by step how to clean the loo, but he seems to have permanent amnesia afterwards. Doesn't mind leaving his skids in the pan though, does he?? Filthy animal.	1/28/2019 4:46 PM
16	I don't do cleaning. My husband does it, otherwise it doesn't get done. I have better things to do with my time.	1/28/2019 4:37 PM
17	He's a lazy arsed twat. He does little to nothing to help as he sits there swilling his beer. I'd be better of sharing the house with a real life pig.	1/28/2019 4:20 PM
18	Don't do any! My wife seems to have OCD where cleaning is concerned, so it's all done by her.	1/28/2019 4:14 PM
19	No	1/25/2019 12:30 PM
20	We share everything equally. We both live there, so we both do our fair share. He's better at ironing than me though!	1/23/2019 1:44 PM

34	I have OCD... my partner hasn't but over the years is getting very much like me as has no choice ☹	1/11/2019 5:03 PM
35	I notice more and sooner than he does	1/11/2019 4:21 PM
36	We share everything 50/50 as we both work full time. If one of us cooks, the other will clean up. If one hooovers, the other dusts. We're a match made in heaven! Most men I know leave everything to their wives, but I believe in partnership. Married 30 years and going strong!	1/11/2019 1:04 PM
37	He doesn't notice messiness or dirtiness in any room other than the kitchen and only because I give him control over the kitchen and it's his one room he has to do	1/11/2019 8:02 AM
38	He will not put things away even though he has storage for clothes. Piles clothes on bedroom chair. Never puts shoes away .	1/10/2019 5:56 AM

44	Too much clutter	1/5/2019 10:55 PM
45	I do the bills, garden and driving	1/5/2019 5:34 PM
46	Causes does, resentment, that i have to come and clean house, when he comes home and sits in front of tv every night and weekend. I also hate it when I come home after 12 hour night shift and he has left a mess for me to clean up, e.g. dirty pans, dishes in sink	1/5/2019 9:48 AM

49	Some tendency to specialise with jobs-things only one of us do and the other is blinkered to.	1/4/2019 8:14 PM
50	In general marriages would be a lot happier if men helped women more around the house, it should be a team effort with the mutual goal of enjoying spending time in a clean and tidy house and not be worried about unexpected guests turning up.	1/4/2019 7:52 PM
51	No, luckily both have same views	1/4/2019 5:48 PM

62	When did 'because I hate cleaning' become an excuse for not doing it and leaving it for your wife <input type="checkbox"/>	1/4/2019 12:04 PM
63	He does his share	1/4/2019 11:59 AM
64	Every night the kitchen is clean and worktops clear Every night he leaves a teaspoon next to the sink/ dishwasher after he makes a cup of tea To stop me sticking it horizontally up his arse, I photograph it and WhatsApp it to my friends instead. They laugh.	1/4/2019 11:48 AM
65	We have a cleaner once a week so actually the issue of cleaning is not something we consider. I would rather pay someone else than do the cleaning myself - much more important things to spend my time on. If people obsess about cleaning I often think that they must lead very boring and unfulfilled lives. Having said that, there is a balance to be struck. I don't see clutter, or mess as a problem so long as dust and dirt are cleaned up regularly - say, once a week.... by someone else....!	1/4/2019 11:34 AM
66	Nope	1/4/2019 11:31 AM
67	Yes, the world remains riddled with sexism. Only men are permitted to take out the bins. Men who don't work are obligated to be house-elves in a way that women would no longer accept. Women are able to point at an instance of filth - or perhaps drop on your laptop while you are typing - oblivious to the fact it is THEIR item of filth. This stereotype is so profound, family-members while pile rubbish (including food waste, nappies, corpses etc) up and around the bins in an artificial ski-slope or ordure rather than empty the bin.	1/4/2019 10:42 AM
68	He's happy to live like a pig in the proverbial.	1/4/2019 10:15 AM
69	Generally me and my partner try to keep a tidy and clean house (it doesn't always happen though). When cleaning me and my partner do about the same amount and both contribute. However, we do have different ideas of what clean is so I do sometimes have to go round after him making sure he has actually cleaned/ tidied properly. Putting things in a cupboard or under the bed does not constitute proper tidying!!	1/4/2019 9:54 AM
70	Partner is a slob. Doesn't bath or shower!	1/3/2019 6:17 PM
71	Putting things away in their proper place is the number 1 issue for her. My biggest issue is just having the motivation to do it knowing I'll just have to do it again later.	1/2/2019 7:14 PM
72	If it bothers me i deal with it as to ignore it bothers me even more	1/2/2019 7:01 PM

74	He has limited mobility, so can't help much	1/2/2019 2:07 PM
75	We don't actually have a car, and we don't live together.	1/2/2019 9:45 AM
76	People are just lazy. Simple. Pick up after yourself. Have some pride.	12/22/2018 3:32 PM
77	We share the chores 50/50. We don't stress about cleaning - life's too short!	12/17/2018 12:47 PM
78	I do the majority of the cleaning and tidying. He does the ironing!	12/17/2018 12:10 PM
79	Men think they do more cleaning than they actually do and they think that we do less than we actually do!	12/17/2018 12:05 PM
80	It annoys me that the majority of cleaning still seems to be done by females. Males generally just don't seem to see it. Ggrrrr	12/17/2018 12:02 PM
81	I am very tidy but really only in my own areas (bedroom, bathroom) as have full control	12/17/2018 12:01 PM
82	He is tidy, but clueless about cleaning. I like cleaning but am an untidy baggage!!	12/17/2018 11:44 AM
